Sometimes these dishes have the same name across countries, but the recipe is totally different . Mexican food is probably the most famous in the US, but there are so many dishes in the rest of the continent. "Pupusas" for instance are representative of "El Salvador", "Nacatamales" and "El Gallo pinto" are traditional dishes in Nicaragua, and just the same "Bandeja Paisa" is a very important one in Colombia.Listen to five Latin food descriptions in Spanish and use the pictures to decide which is the dish that the speaker is talking about.Conversation script: Latin food descriptions in Spanish El ceviche se come en varios países. En Centroamérica incluye pescado adobado en jugo de limón, sal, pimienta negra, cebollas, cilantro, chiles y ajo finamente picados. Una empanada es masa de pan rellena con una preparación salada o dulce y cocida al horno o frita. El relleno puede incluir carnes rojas o blancas, pescado, verduras o fruta. Para elaborar las pupusas primeramente se necesita una masa, que en El Salvador es elaborada por lo general de maíz molido. Son básicamente una tortilla, pero la diferencia es que en su interior se les agregan otros ingredientes que le dan un sabor único. Se pueden hacer pupusas de queso, de frijoles y muchos otros sabores. La base de los tacos son las características tortillas de harina o maíz mexicanas que envuelven el relleno, que suele contener siempre carne de res o de cerdo. Se pueden clasificar los tacos de muy diferentes maneras, una de ellas es por el tipo de carne con que se hacen. El gallo pinto es uno entre varios platos americanos que involucran en su preparación el arroz y los frijoles, ingredientes considerados parte integral de la cultura de muchos países, en los cuales se pueden encontrar diferentes versiones.Listening Activity No.2.
