Who says you have to go to the theatre to enjoy that big screen movie experience? Now you can get that same kind of feeling of home comfort with this Ultra HD 1080P Smart Home Projector, discounted at 59 percent for a limited time. This projector adds an extra dose of excitement to your old family movie nights. It is capable of producing an HD image up to 200 inches in size, which is monstrous even when compared to the largest consumer-grade televisions out there. And, unlike some other types of projectors, this one is super easy to use. It features a 360° Keystone correction, you can connect it to your phone via Wi-Fi or other source via HDMI, and even has a built-in speaker so you don't have to waste the audio time to work. The Ultra HD 1080P Smart Projector is easy to set up, effortless to use, and easily affordable. And especially right now, since it has been discounted to only $79.95, while supplies last. Ultra HD 1080P Intelligent Home Projector â $ 79.95View prices subject to change. Yesterday, Sprint and HTC announced the HTC EVO 4G LTE, the latest in the EVO series from Sprint. While the device is largely exceptional*, it's simply a modified version of the HTC One XL that is addressed to AT & T*. There's one particular feature that stands out: HD Voice. For the first time in several years, voice calls are getting an update. But what is HD voice and what does it offer? HD voice is an umbrella term that refers to technologies that enhance the quality of an audio call, or the audio part of a video call. Depending on the calling system you are using, HD voice may or may not be available. Most people experience HD voice, when using VoIP platforms like Skype on their computers. Without Most people do not consider Skype an HD voice platform because it is not a telephone system. With the transition to predominantly digital cellular/satellite communications, unlike the Telephone network switching terrestrial circuits, HD Voice became possible for telephony. Even better, governments around the world are now considering replacing traditional circuit-switching telephone networks (potes) with VoIP networks switched in the optical fibre package. For cellular networks (and possibly cellular/satellite hybrids), HD Voice has been in development since 2000. In the past two years, the specifications for HD voice in CDMA2000, GSM, HSPA+ and LTE have been finalized. However, this year is the year that device manufacturers are finally offered the latest modem chipsets (of Qualcomm's liking) that have full support for HD Voice.HD Voice On CDMA2000 requires upgrading the 1x carrier to 1x Advanced. This new network infrastructure upgrade increases the capacity and range of a given cell by up to 70%, but more importantly it extends the 1x channel to about 300 kbps, which gives more than enough space to support a higher-quality audio codec. The narrowband/broadband) broadband/broadband) broadband/broadband) codec for CDMA2000 systems is a redesigned codec that can scale from the narrowband channel sizes currently compatible with CDMA2000 to the new broadband channel sizes provided with advanced CDMA2000 1x. In addition, a multi-micphone noise cancellation system is required to make the most of the codec. The new codec allows proper audio encoding in the range of 50Hz-4KHZ at a sample rate of 16 kHz, as opposed to half of half for the older single-band band codec. In addition, the broadband codec actually goes up to 7 kHz instead of 4kHz, offering slightly better audio recording capabilities. On the GSM side of things (which includes 2G GSM, HSPA+ and LTE), HD Voice is largely a network upgrade. However, the audio channel for the base stations needs to be expanded a bit to make room for the AMR-WB codec (adaptable broadband). AMR-WB and EVRC-NW offer largely the same benefits and have the same requirements. However, HD voice update is easier on the GSM side, GSM. However, no updates of mass equipment are required in the base station / side of the tower. However, there are restrictions for HD voice implementations currently available. It seems that the CDMA2000 and the variants of the GSM family of HD Voice are not interoperable for the foreseeable future, so the GSM calls to CDMA telephones and vice versa will go down the narrow band codes that support interoperability systems Current For CDMA2000 networks, each participant in a call must be connected to a CDMA2000 1x advanced cDMA2000 and each headset connected to the advanced cells 1x must have a chipset that supports 1x advanced and the new codec (from The opposite, it becomes 1X and the oldest codec). For GSM networks, all the telephones involved in the call must support the Codec AMR-WB.IN LTE, HD VOICE is incorrect in the Standard Volte, because Volte uses AMR-WB. While the device is compatible with AMR-WB, then HD VOICE is possible. The only thing that remains would be so that the operator of the network enables the HD voice on the network. For wiring networks (standard telephone), the HD voice is not available. All Wireline Telephone Services currently available (including those based â
