Our staff at Comaszone.net Compa report on the launch of TheAPC, Alpha Fuse Services, but promise to start reaping all the benefits of WhatsApp. So far, an important requirement for using the Messenger platform on a computer has been to launch it through the Android emulator like Blue Stacks, a requirement that we don't need with TheAPC. The program has versions for Windows and Linux (32 and 64 bit). Regarding benefits, the fact that you don't need any installation. After loading it from the official website and unpacking it, we can launch it directly from the hard drive, from a USB card or from memory. To do this we start the "thanaPC" file and fill in the system fields requested on the initial screen: Nick of our background. Thanks to this time, WhatsApp is reserved for use from a smartphone. It is not surprising that remember that the position of the applications of applications is more acute in their use on devices other than in the world. WhatsApp doesn't want to be used on other devices. So don't hesitate to unblock (and even ban) the application users if you find that you are not using it from your smartphone. After the fulfillment, we just have to drop the contacts and talk to them. One of the advantages of other alternatives using Android emulators is that conversations are real-time. A great option for those who want to use WhatsApp on their PC. At the moment everyone knows what WhatsApp is in the movie. What they no longer know is that the application for exchanging instant messages and chat is not intended to work on Android and iPhone smartphones, but also on a PC for use from your desktop with your official application and not with can be installed on the third-party-developments. Download the WhatsApp client for Windows, since the confirmation is confirmation from the users of the application, which also communicated in a chat with a PC. Our colleagues from REDESZONE.NET inform of the launch of thatsapc, which is still in the Alpha phase, but announces the gradual takeover of all the advantages of WhatsApp. Until now, its launch has been an Android emulator, such as Blue Magazines, an essential request to use a platform to send messages to a computer that will not be necessary for Isapc. The program has two versions for Windows and Linux (32 and 64 bit). In terms of function, it allows you to add contacts via a very simple interface (save it on your device so that you do not have to import them constantly), perform individual conversations and modify our nickname and status of One of them the greatest advantages of TheAPC is that it does not require installation. After downloading from the official website and unpack, we can run it directly from the hard drive, the memory card or the memory card. To this end, we execute the "ISAPC" file and fill the field required on the connection screen: Nick for use, our mobile phone and its prefix (+34 in Spain) and Imei from our phone. The use of this WhatsApp code is that it is used from a smartphone. No wonder, do not forget that the position of the creators of application is fixed to use it on other devices outside the mobile. WhatsApp does not want it to be used on other computers, so he does not hesitate to cause problems (and even block) of application users if they discover that they do not use it from their smartphone. Once finished, we only have to add contacts and start talking to them. One of the advantages compared to other alternatives using Android emulators is that conversations take place in real time. Excellent choice for those who want to use WhatsApp on their computer. At this stage of the film, everyone already knows what WhatsApp is. What nobody knows how to anemore is that this application for the maintenance of instant messages and cats is not only designed to operate on smartphones with Android and iPhone phones, but can also be installed on a PC and used to Starting from and of office with an official computer application, not with third-party solution.
