translate Sharing buttons: In this post, you'll learn how to translate a web page in Google Chrome on desktop or mobile, how to adjust Google translation settings, how to change Chrome language. For more Chrome tips, computer tips, useful computer tools, you can visit MiniTool Software official website. Wonder how to translate a page in Google Chrome? Check the detailed instructions below. Google Chrome is one of the most popular browsers used by many people. By default, Google Chrome translates most foreign language websites to English. You can choose to turn on this feature on or off. In Google Chrome browser, you can easily translate a web page into English or other preferred languages. If you go to a website in another language, Chrome browser will pop up a request to ask you if you want to translate the page. You can also customize Chrome to always translate pages. For Chrome mobile app, you can see a language bar at the bottom of the screen to let you switch between the original language and English. How to Translate a Page in Google Chrome on Desktop Way 1 Launch Google Chrome browser on your computer. Open the webpage that is in another language. After opening the page, you should see a pop-up window saying "Translate this page?". You can click Translate option to instantly translate this page to English or your first language. If you don't see the pop-up, you can refresh the page. Alternatively, you can click Translate this page icon at the right corner of the address bar. If you do not see English, you can click the three-dot icon and select Choose another language. Then you can click the drop-down icon to select a language that you want to translate the page into. Chrome will automatically translate the web page to the chosen language. Way 2 After you open the web page, you can right-click anywhere on the page and choose Translate to language. The pop-up window should appear, and you can follow the instructions above to translate the page to English or your first language. How to Change Default Translation Settings in Google Chrome By default, Chrome offers this translation feature to translate web pages in a language you don't understand. You can also adjust the translation settings by yourself. Open Chrome browser on your computer. Click the three-dot menu icon at the top-right corner and select Settings. Click Advanced in the left panel and click Languages. In the right window, click Language to expand it. To turn on or off Google translate feature, you can switch on or off the option Offer to translate pages that aren't in a language you read. If you want to turn translation on or off for a specific language, you can click the three-dot icon next to the language you prefer to use, and turn on or off Offer to translate pages in this language. If you don't see the target language, you can click Add languages link to add the target language. How to Change the Language of Google Chrome By default, Chrome automatically displays in the system language of your computer. If you want to change the language that Chrome displays the content and all settings, you can follow the steps below. Open Chrome, click the three-dot icon, and click Settings. Click Advanced -> Languages -> Language. Click the three-dot icon next to the target language you want to use and click Display Google Chrome in this language. If the language is not listed, you can click Add languages to add the language. Restart Chrome browser and it will show all things in the language you choose. Now you should know how to translate a page in Google Chrome. For more computer tips and tricks, and computer software, you can visit MiniTool Software website. One super useful option is Chrome's ability to automatically translate foreign websites so that the language barrier does not prevent you from exploring the Web. In this article, we show you how you can translate web pages with the Google Chrome browser on your desktop as well as your mobile device. How to Easily Translate a Page in Chrome on Desktop The translation feature is built in to the Chrome browser, so there is no need to install any extension or enable any flags. 1. On your computer, open the Chrome browser and go to a webpage in a foreign language. 2. In the search bar on the right you'll notice a small Google Translate icon. Tap on it and choose the target language. (It's your system's default language.) 3. Alternatively, click on the three-dot menu on the right and select another language to translate the page. 4. You should now be able to read the contents of the webpage in a language that you understand. If you wish to change the system language on your PC, follow the instructions in this guide to learn how to do so. How to Easily Translate Any Website in Chrome for Mobile The translation feature is available in Chrome for both Android and iOS, and the usage is the same for both. This option is active by default, so you won't have to do anything in particular to enable it. Just navigate to a webpage that's in a foreign language, and Chrome will immediately ask you whether you want to translate it. The browser will recognize the source language and translate it into the target language, which is usually the one set as the phone's default system language. If your phone is set to English, that's what other languages will be translated to. 1. Open Google Chrome on your mobile device and navigate to a web page displaying a foreign language. 2. A translation bar will pop up at the bottom of the screen showing you the source and target languages. 3. Tap on the target language (in this case English) to start the translation. 4. The text on the website should now be in English. Change Target Language in Android Follow the instructions below to change your default system language in Android. 1. Open Settings on your device. 2. Scroll down until you find the "System" option toward the bottom and tap on it. 3. Select "Language & Input." 4. Tap "Languages (country/region)." 5. Select "Add a language." 6. Choose the new language you wish to use as your default system language. Now you will get suggestions for translation in that particular language. Change Target Language in iOS Follow the instructions below to change your default system language in iOS. 1. Open Settings on your device. 2. Scroll down and tap on "General." 3. Select "Language & Region." 4. Tap on "Other Languages..." underneath "iPhone Language." 5. Choose your desired new language to use as your default system language. Translations will now appear in that language. Note that now your original language and the new target language will now show as your preferred languages, with the option still there to add yet another language. How to Change the Target Language with Ease Alternatively, you may not wish to change the default system language. If you just require a single translation, there's no point in making that change. Luckily, you can switch to a new target language very easily. 1. In the translation bar at the bottom of the web page, tap on the three-dot icon on the right. 2. In the menu that appears, select "More Languages." 3. Select your target language of choice. 4. Tap on the selection again to have the website translated to the new language. 5. From the same menu, you can opt to disable the option to translate pages written in a certain source language. Alternatively, you can ensure Chrome always translates pages in that language. How to Enable Translation for Multiple Languages It's also possible to switch between target languages by accessing your browser's settings. 1. In Chrome, tap on the three-dot icon in the top-right corner. 2. Select "Settings." 3. Scroll down and tap the "Languages" option. 4. Tap on "Add languages" to add more. 5. Once you've added a new language, tap on the three dots to disable/enable the "Offer to translate" option. 6. Keep in mind that you need to move the language you want your translations in to the top of the list for Chrome to suggest translations in this language. 7. Additionally, if you don't want Google Chrome to show you the translation bar every time you visit a page in a foreign language, you can disable it from here. Just toggle off the "Offer to translate pages in other languages" option at the bottom of the screen. Frequently Asked Questions How do you fix it if Google Chrome translate is not working? On desktop - try refreshing the page. If the feature is still not functional, right-click anywhere on the page and select the "Translate to [language]" option from there. On mobile - if the feature is not working, try turning it off following the steps described above and then back on again. Restart it and see if it works. If you still can't tap on "translate," the language might not be available for translation. What do you do if the Google Chrome translate option is not showing? On desktop – follow the instructions detailed in section 1 . Alternatively, you can use Google to search for an article with that title.

Once the search results pop up, click on the "Translate this page" option next to the desired link. On mobile – If you can't see the Translate bar at the bottom of the page, you can request a translation instead. While in the Chrome app on the page you want to translate, tap on the three-dot menu in the upper-right corner and tap on Translate. Are there any good Google Chrome translation extensions I can use on desktop? With the integration of Google Translate into Chrome for Web, it's not really necessary to use an extension. But if for whatever reason the feature is still not working for you, or you need more than the basic translation, you can install the Google Translate extension in your desktop browser. There are also other worthy options to choose from, such as ImTranslator and Mate Translate. Wrapping Up Knowing how to translate web pages in Google Chrome allows you to easily check out sites written in a language that you don't understand.
