Christmas Lessons & Games: More coming up with ideas for youth sermons can be tough! Sometimes you feel like you've talked about everything with your group and just can't figure out what to do next! You want to have relevant youth sermons for your students, but feel like you're scraping the barrel to come up with what direction to go next! We've been there! That's why we came up with this list of 450 topics for youth sermon, series, or lesson. With as many ideas as there are on this list, we know that it's still just scratching the surface There are infinite ideas for youth sermons - we just wanted to give you a list to turn to if you're trying to figure out what to talk about next. If you find a topic on this list you'd like to speak on, we encourage you to just take it from there and dig further into how you'd present the issue. But the one thing we want to stress is that in our belief, after 27 years combined experience in youth ministry, is that all good youth sermons relate directly back to Jesus. Every topic on this list, in one way or another, can be brought back to the cornerstone truth of our Gospel - that Jesus Christ lives, wants a relationship with us, and wants to change our lives now and eternal. Seriously, every youth sermon can relate directly to Jesus. To prove it to you, we're going to take one of the most random topics on this list - which is under the category of Self-Issues - A youth sermon about "catfishing"/pretending to be someone else online. Now, you probably know what a "catfishing"/pretending to be someone else online. Now, you probably know what a "catfishing"/pretending to be someone else online. Now, you probably know what a "catfishing"/pretending to be someone else online. Now, you probably know what a "catfishing"/pretending to be someone else online. show "Catfish" is a slang term for a person online using a fake photo or fake name to pretend like they are someone else. A catfish typically has fake social media accounts and tries to lure others into relationships, providing information, or exploiting by some other means. So how could you take a topic like this and relate it back to Jesus? It's simpler than you might think. Impersonating someone else online is an identity issue, and the "catfish" are often people who are very insecure in their identities and don't value their worth. A great lesson on this real issue teens face would begin by examining why people pretend to be someone else online and asking the students if they've ever encountered this problem (they almost certainly have) and why they think students do that. You might then share a real-life story found online about the detrimental effects of impersonating others, and help the teens to see that this can lead to real problems Then, using a passage of Scripture that speaks to Jesus imparting identity on us (Matt. 11:28, John 15, etc), interface with the issue of catfishing contrasted with finding a rooted identity in Christ. Wrap up the lesson with some small group questions that focus on exploring false identity, and how we should respond to people who use fake identities online. See what we mean? Every youth sermon can relate directly back to Jesus. This is one of the most important ways to create a youth group culture that is centered on Christ and Gospel-focused. So as you read through this list, please think in terms of how you can relate these topics directly to the truth of who God is and what God is doing through the ministry of Christ and the Holy Spirit in our lives. We hope this list helps spur your thoughts and we'd love to hear about any great youth Sermons or ideas that you are able to piece together from ideas, and even questions that can lead you to crafting great youth sermons.
