© 1996-2014, Amazon.com, Inc. or its affiliates teaching children to turn off the lights in a room where they are no longer found is a difficult job. No matter how many times I try to explain that leaving the lights in the electricity wastes, it just doesn't seem to sink. In their defense, they are like little tops that float from one room to another playing with trains in one; Read in another and just stop to use the toilet in the bathroom (leaving the lid is another problem! ugh). When Lutron approached me to give my children a hand with the lights, he intrigued me immediately. Turns out Lutron just introduced the Master occupancy sensor attenuator that can be easily installed instead of an existing light switch. (One post switches are easier. Dual or multiple location switches may require a little more wiring and programming to work properly). After thinking, I decided to try the teacher in our art and crafts studio. This is the room we least notice when the light bulbs are burning (it is over the garage and is separated by our guest room from the rest of the house). Follow to see how to install yours. Your attentive nature can be rewarded at the end. 05-1-2000 (I have affiliate links for your convenience. I earn a small percentage of a purchase using these links. There is no additional cost to you. You can read more about affiliate links here). occupancy sensor on a 3-way switch Materials: be sure to buy the specific switch for your location. If your light is only controlled with a switch, the single-pole switch is used. If your light is controlled by two separate switches, choose the 3-way switch or multiple location. (A 3-way configuration has been called, although there are only two switches. Be confused.) Here is a video tutorialTo install the attenuator del Occupiáda de Lutron Maestro in una una configuration of 3 wires: photo shoot: photographic photographic 1. Make sure you have the power turned off to the light AND any other switches that are in the same switch box. Test all the power (black and red) lines with a voltage tester before proceeding. 2. Remove the existing light switch from the junction box but do not remove the wires yet. You may wish to mark which wire was connected to which screw. Especially if this is one of two switches that controls the same light fixture. 3. This is where things can get tricky. The lighting in our art room is controlled by two separate switches (3-way switch configuration.) One switch at the top of the stairs and one at the bottom. I added the Maestro to the top switch since this is the one that will sense motion as the kids and I are playing in the room. 4. Wire the Maestro in the location that will view the activity in your room. Always wire the ground (green or bare wires) first. This will ground the switch should someone accidentally turn the power back on. Also, the Lutron sensor must be grounded to work properly. Then connect your house white or neutral wire to the brass screw. Attach the black wire to the black screw. Finally, attach the red wire to the blue screw. 5. In order for the Maestro to maintain power, you must re-wire the other switch that controls your light fixture. The red wire remains attached to the mechanical switch. Remove the black and white wires from the switch. Twist them together along with the yellow jumper wire included with the Lutron Maestro. Connect the yellow wire to the black screw on the switch. 6. Screw the mechanical switch back into the junction box. 7. Screw the Lutron Maestro back into its junction box. 8. Turn the power back on and test both switches to your light fixture to insure that they work properly. 9. Attach the face plate and youcÁÁAre done.
